Army Day In Chicago As Seen By The Editor

One day last week S. Sgt. George E. Spencer, of the U. S. Army Recruiting Service at Chicago Heights, called at the Tinley Park Times office and left two reserved seat tickets for the Army Day program held in Soldier's Field last Saturday afternoon. Sgt. Spencer in presenting the tickets, said this was in appreciation for various articles we have printed in our publications, these articles being given us by Sgt. Spencer at various times and the we feel indebted to him for his courtesy, for Army Day was truly an inspiring event.

The editor and his son-in-law, Ray Westlund, a printer in our shop, decided to make a day of it. We left Mokena on the 8:25 a. m. Rock Island train arriving in Chicago about 9:25. We decided to go over to State Street and see President Harry S. Truman and his entourage and other dignitaries, passing through the city to the Blackstone Hotel on Michigan Ave. We found an ideal spot a short distance north of Jackson Blvd. We were in the front row without any obstruction in front of us. Within the next ten minutes, someone said: "Here they come" and sure enough the parade headed by motorcycle police followed by cars bearing the presidential party.

The President was welcomed at the Union Station by a cheering crowd of thousands. Mayor Edward J. Kelly entered the car and greeted President Truman, then rode with him in an open car through loop streets to the Blackstone Hotel.

Other notables in the auto were: Senator Scott W. Lucas of Illinois and Secretary of War, Robert Patterson. In the motorcade behind them came the other high civil and military officials, including General of the Army, Dwight Eisenhower and Gen. Carl Spaatz, Commander of the Army Air Forces, who received ovations almost equal to that of the President. Mrs. Truman and daughter Margaret were among those who followed the presidential party in closed cars. The President stood bareheaded in the tonneau of the car and waved his hat to the great throng of people lining both sides of the street and in the windows of buildings along the line of march.

Soon as this parade was over, State street was quickly cleared and traffic resumed its normal flow.

He was in a coma until 11:15 Sunday morning when he passed away, never regaining consciousness.

Better Market Fowl Needed by Farmers

Chicken of Tomorrow Must Have More Meat

While the development of meatier chickens has been remarkable in the past few years, there is still room for improvement.

In order to add at least 10 per cent more meat to the present-day chicken, to secure a higher percentage of meat to bone structure, a hunt for the "Chicken of Tomorrow" is under way.

D. D. Slade, Lexington, Ky., poultryman, has been appointed chairman of a national committee which will supervise the distribution of $8,000 in prizes to poultrymen who can improve their breed and strain, so as to produce the ideal market fowl. The contest is sponsored by the A & P Food Stores.

The contest will last for three years and provides for progress awards totaling $3,000 with $5,000 going to the poultryman who develops the ideal market fowl.

Improved Equipment Ratchet-Action Wrench

An automatic, adjustable, ratchet-action wrench, product of Hedstrom Industries, Chicago, has just been placed on the market.

The wrench adjusts itself automatically through an instant thumb-trigger and an automatic eye control that keeps the jaws in positive constant grip on square, hexagonal, metric and odd-sized nuts while the wrench handle is in manual operation.

Cow Tether Device

Tether That Holds the Cow But Gives Her Plenty of Freedom.

Pasture may be increased by staking the cow along the road or irrigation ditch. A wire cable may be used as shown, which has been fastened to two iron stakes. A block on the cable will keep the chain from winding and hold it away from the stakes.

Treating Poultry for Gapeworm Infestation

A safe and rapid treatment for removing gapeworms from chickens and turkeys has been developed by the U. S. bureau of animal industry.

GAPEWORMS IN WINDPIPE OF TURKEY

The new treatment involves the use of the chemical, barium antimony tartrate, as a dust. When breathed by infested chicks it causes dislodgment of the parasites. The powdered drug is dispersed in a box containing infested birds, and the powder is inhaled by these birds. As many as 50 birds have been treated successfully at one time with one ounce of the chemical.

Vaccination Alone Can Not Cure Brucellosis

The vaccination of heifer and bull calves 4 to 8 months old is usually advisable when there is any possibility of brucellosis, or Bang's disease. When an outbreak is starting it might be advisable to also vaccinate the adult herd.

Vaccination of calves, blood-testing of breeding cows, and proper feeding, sanitation, and management present a program that should largely do away with brucellosis.

LOU BOUDREAU, the 29-year-old manager of Cleveland's Indians and one of baseball's best shortstops, has the brand and breed of club he likes to handle.

Bob Feller

In the main it is a young club, a big club, a hustling club and it is backed up by four talented starting pitchers. These are Bob Feller, Allie Reynolds, Steve Gromek and Charley Embree, with other possibilities who should help.

"This is a tough race for anyone to predict," Boudreau tells me. "I mean a tough season in trying to guess postwar form. I will say right at the start that I can't see any hot chance of our Indians beating out the Yankees, Red Sox or Tigers. But maybe we can nip one of them with our pitching and our hustle and finish as high as third. Fourth place is our main goal and that won't be any sure thing."

"I'm looking largely to a year or two on beyond when these kids will be seasoned. And don't forget by that time our starting pitchers, headed by Bob Feller, should still be going strong. It isn't an old staff. Feller, Reynolds, Gromek and Embree are all well under 30."

It might be stated here that the combination of Lou Boudreau and Ray Mack gives the earnest Indians a strong spot at short and second, where strength is needed.

It might also be mentioned that in Lou Boudreau the Indians have a young manager who is rapidly gaining experience, for which there is no substitute in sport. Not often, anyway.

"If the Yankees, Tigers and Red Sox play up to their expected form," Boudreau says, "I can't see how they are to be crowded out from the first three places. But a lot of things can happen through a long baseball season. A lot of things. After all none of the top three will be cheering when they have to face our pitching staff day after day, and they all know this."

"It means a lot to have four good starters you can bank on. Pitching has always been and always will be a big part of baseball. How much? Well, maybe 60 or 70 per cent."

Bob Feller's Future

It was worth while taking another look at Bob Feller, hardest working member on the Cleveland roster.

I asked Feller about his improved curve ball. I heard he had developed this in the navy.

"No," Bob said, "that isn't right. I've had about the same curve for some years now. Only before I depended too much on my fast one. Now I'm simply using more curves. This also helps save my arm."

"I didn't get to do so much pitching in the navy," Bob went on, "but I'll tell you one new thing I learned. This was a slider. I don't know how it will work out, but it may help."

A Bob Feller with a slider added to his fast ball and his curve ball isn't going to be happy news to American league hitters.

I didn't have the nerve to ask Feller how many years he thought he might have left. For at the age of 27, 28 in November, my guess would be at least 10 years more. This is still a guess for I felt sure that Dizzy Dean would have better than 10 years left when something snapped and went sour in his right shoulder blade.

All I can say here is that Bob Feller is smart enough to be thinking about 1946, not 1948 or 1950. He knows what the hazards are when you are wheeling that fast one and that quick break in game after game against bats that too often are loaded with poison.

True Color in Baseball

The Yankees have been accused in the past of lacking color.

I was talking about this matter of Yankee color with Manager Joe McCarthy recently.

"In my opinion," he said, "this 1946 Yankee team has my idea of true color—the color that really belongs. By that I mean the color we have in infield skill and in outfield skill and power."

"I believe big crowds will get their thrills out of watching our infield in practice—Rizzuto and Gordon around second, Stirnweiss at third—in the execution of their plays."

"Those who love baseball—or those who love athletic skill above the average, will see Rizzuto, Gordon and Stirnweiss make plays that belong to a circus. They are the greatest infield combination in this respect I have ever seen. Remember, I am predicting no pennant. We don't know too much about our pitching yet. But I know what our infield can do. I know the impossible plays this infield can make, the type of plays that give any crowd a big kick—even if we lose. Rizzuto and Gordon are two acrobats. They are the type of color I want."

Gems of Thought

IT IS one thing to wish to have truth on our side, and another to wish sincerely to be on the side of truth.—Whately.

Fortitude is the marshal of thought, the armor of the will, and the fort of reason.—Bacon.

We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths; in feelings, not in figures on a dial. We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives who thinks, feels the noblest, acts the best. —BAILEY.

The best preparation for the future is the present well seen to, the last duty well done.—G. Macdonald.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wise when neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

TURNING POINT

By Mary Imlay Taylor

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Sherwin tells Mac that Stenhart is his cousin. It was Stenhart's testimony that convicted Sherwin of killing their uncle. After eight years, he escaped from prison and finally tracked Stenhart to the ranch—to kill him. They went to the stables and got two horses. Old Mac led the way to a trail that led up to the cliff. Hobbling their horses they proceeded on foot to a hidden cabin Old Mac had known about for years. But Jordan was in the cabin! Jordan escaped again. Mac advised Sherwin to skip at daybreak. "I don't believe you did it," Mac said as he rode away, leaving Sherwin to stare after him. Sherwin bedded down in the brush to wait out the night.

CHAPTER VII

There was small likelihood of Jordan following so far, and Sherwin turned back to the mountain path at last, with a feeling that Mac, at least, was safe.

It was half an hour later when he found himself near the cabin again. He had approached from the ledge and stood in the shadow of a live oak, listening intently. Personally, he had no thought that Jordan would return here, for Jordan did not really know how many had been in the attacking party, and he must know that the sheriff was after him with a posse. Sherwin reasoned that he would scarcely venture back that night and, on the other hand, Mac thought that he, Sherwin, meant to leave at daybreak. He smiled grimly, he wanted Mac to think just that! Meanwhile, he hid his food pack and his blanket; he should not starve while he waited. And he intended to wait here until he met Stenhart again face to face. He advanced cautiously, made sure that the cabin was empty, and, determined to take no risks, found a spot in the redwoods where he could look out on a scene as bright as day with moonlight, himself unseen; and unrolling his blanket, he lay down there to rest. He wanted to smoke, but the chances were against that, although he believed himself to be utterly alone. He clasped his hands under his head and lay there thinking steadily, not only of his purpose, but of the past. He recalled his uncle's violent end. The old man had made a will in Stenhart's favor, having quarreled with Sherwin's father, then, when his father died, the eccentric old man sent for him, liked him, and spoke of altering his will and dividing the property between his two nephews. No one knew of this. He had spoken only to Sherwin, and, when he was found dead, Max Stenhart accused the cousin who was, he said, cut off and disinherited because of a quarrel. He had come upon Sherwin just after the latter discovered the dead man, and he swore the knife was in his cousin's hand. Perjury? Yes! Sherwin could have believed that his cousin had killed the old man to make sure of his inheritance before the will was changed, but Max had proved his alibi. There was no one to testify for the newcomer, the nephew who was little known in the neighborhood.

Sherwin had escaped from jail by a mere accident. Two other convicts had tunneled a way out, and at the last moment they invited him to join them. The thought of liberty had set him wild; he had taken their chances, jumped into the river with them, got ashore in the dark and, with their help, changed into another suit of clothes. He had one faithful friend who had taken care of the little money he had of his own. He had got that secretly and, against the pleadings of his friend, gained west—after Stenhart!

Search for him had been so far fruitless; he had been advertised, tracked—all in vain. The fates were with him; he would not be taken until he had reckoned with his enemy, the man who had sworn away his liberty. He had found him! Found him making love to a girl who could not know how vile he was, the liar! And that girl—?

Sherwin rose and began to walk to and fro; he had forgotten the outlaws, what were they to him? He was himself an outlaw! Jane had recoiled as if he were in very deed the criminal Stenhart's black lie had made of him. Love is so close to hate that he almost hated Jane in the passion of his shame that she had scorned him for Stenhart's sake. More than once, when he had looked into her eyes, his stern purpose to kill the man had wavered. She had roused the best that was in him, but now her shudder of horror at the crime had turned him into a human tiger. He wanted blood—nothing else but Stenhart's blood would satisfy his fury. He would kill him.

Jane had passed a sleepless night, a new experience for her cheerful youth, and she rose early, dressed in her riding-suit and slipped out into the hall long before breakfast time. She was going out and she did not want questions asked. She had 'phoned to the stables to have Tex saddled and waiting.

The wide old hall was flooded with morning light and, almost unconsciously, her eyes turned toward Jim's desk. She seemed to see Sherwin standing there as on that first night. She stopped a moment and stood looking at it, remembering every word that he had said.

She was still there, motionless, when she heard a step behind her. She looked up, startled, and saw Stenhart.

"I didn't know you got about so early," she exclaimed. "How much better you are!"

He took no notice of her little half-hearted attempt at lightness. He came close, looking down at her with his stormy eyes.

"Where are you going, Jane?" he demanded gravely. She flushed hotly. "Out for a canter before breakfast," she answered shortly.

He did not believe it, she saw that in his eyes, and her flush deepened. He leaned his hand on the desk beside hers. She could feel the emotion that shook him and she dreaded it. She tried to escape.

"I must be going—" she began nervously. "Jane!"

She raised her eyes reluctantly to his. "You're not fully yourself yet, Max, you look pale—sit down here, let me call Fanny."

He laughed bitterly. "You can't evade me, Jane. I'm here for my answer. Will you marry me now—at once?"

"Are you quite generous? I asked you to give me time!" she parried. "I've given you time! I'm human, Jane, I can't endure this any more. Will you marry me now?"

He had laid his hand over hers on top of the old desk. She felt it trembling as she drew hers sharply away.

"I'm sorry," she said in a low voice, "but I can't!"

"Do you mean not now? Or never?" he was breathing hard.

Jane felt a sudden fear of him, a fear she had never felt of Sherwin, though Sherwin was a convicted murderer! She tried to give him a friendly smile, but her lips shook. "I mean never, Max."

There was a moment of intense silence. The sweet morning air coming in through the window lifted the soft hair on her forehead; she was pale but her blue eyes shone. Something in his look and his manner angered her.

"I know why, Jane!" he exclaimed bitterly.

"I'm sorry, Max, I must go—I'll see you again at breakf—"

He caught her wrist violently. "You shan't go! You're in love with that fellow!"

"You've no right to say that to me!" Jane flashed at him angrily; then she remembered that he had been ill, and relented. "It's all over, Max; can't we be friends?"

He shook his head, folding his arms and standing there, motionless. His expression was sullen, but there was a strange light in his dark eyes.

"Oh, if you don't want to be friends!" Jane turned away proudly. "I'm going out now, Max!" She lifted her chin scornfully. He was behaving like a sulky boy, she thought; she liked to see a man lose like a good sport, like—well, like a brave man!

Stenhart said nothing at all, but she was aware of his tall figure motionless there behind her. She felt his eyes on her back, but she hurried away, ran down the slope to the stable and swung herself into the saddle.

"I'll be back presently, Jose," said she lightly, giving Tex his head. The vaquero stood watching her ride off, a smile on his dark face. "She some rider!" he thought.

Tex had cleared the bridge almost at a bound. The horse was full of pep today, ready to run, but Jane rode like a boy. The man stood watching, shading his eyes with a hand burnt black by the sun. He was surprised at the way she went. So surprised that he jumped when a voice spoke sharply at his elbow.

"Saddle one of the horses, I want one right off!"

The vaquero stared. "You able to ride, Meester Stenhar?"

"Get a move on you! Saddle up."

Jose grinned, saddling a steady horse for this sick man. "He catch up with seniorita, eh?" The grin widened into silent laughter. But he was amazed at the ease with which Stenhart mounted; he did not know that sheer rage can carry even a sick man far.

But, after crossing the bridge, Stenhart slowed down his horse. He had glimpsed Jane far ahead and she might turn and look back; it was no part of his purpose to have her look back! Besides, in spite of his bravado, he was almost swaying in the saddle. Illness had weakened him and the sunshine seemed amazingly vivid; his eyes ached. But his will power kept him erect on the horse, and he rose steadily. Now and then he lost sight of the rider in front but he knew there was no cross-road and he could afford to give her a long lead. She was not riding so fast now; in a way he sensed that she was looking for some spot, or expected to meet some one. He had had that in mind from the first!

The flame of jealousy within him leaped up and tortured him. He saw nothing of the beauty of the day, the near hills green and brown, the distant blue peaks against the blue sky, the shadows in the canyons, the wooded spurs, the slopes of Las Palomas falling behind him. Presently his horse forced a wide stream. It ran swiftly, and it seemed to him his ear caught the sound of a cataract somewhere in the ravine, then he saw Jane so close ahead that he reined in violently. His horse plunged and he was near discovery. But, happily for him, the girl took no thought of being followed; she had found an unused trail and turned into it. For an instant Stenhart thought he had lost her and his heart beat stormily, then he sighted her through the trees. He dismounted, hid his horse in the brush and followed on foot. Ten yards up the trail she had slipped from the saddle and vanished up a steep ascent. Passing Tex, where he was cropping grass, Stenhart crept after her, treading softly, and, as he climbed, the tumult of the cataract came nearer and nearer; it must be below him now, hidden by the trees. Far up he caught a glimpse of a slender figure still ahead and he followed doggedly.

Sherwin had slept heavily, physically exhausted, and it was sunrise when he awoke. The solitude of the wooded height seemed drenched in peace. He saw only great tree-trunks about him, and the sun had not yet penetrated their dense shade. Somewhere a bird sang sweetly. For a moment it seemed impossible that he had fallen asleep with hatred in his heart, but his first waking consciousness brought it all back; he was to stay here, hidden, until he killed Stenhart! Nothing less would satisfy his thirst for vengeance.

He opened his food pack and ate sparingly; there was a lovely spring close at hand, and he lacked for nothing now. His meal finished he rose and began to explore the place; it was evident that Jordan had not returned. There was no sound but those innumerable small noises of life in the woods, and the music of the cataract far below him. He moved on in profound leisure, and since he did not now intend flight he had ample time on his hands.

Presently he came upon a rocky ledge and, as he climbed, his foot slipped, and he rolled down into some brambles and felt a strong current of air. Only slightly bruised from his fall, he rose to his knees and found that he had torn the brambles away from the open mouth of a cavern. The keen breeze that came from it lifted the hair on his forehead; there must be another opening somewhere. Curiosity made him explore carefully.

No one had known of this spot; it was webbed with cobwebs, choked with roots, and he pushed them aside and entered, stooping. To his surprise, he found himself in a cavern of considerable size. Away from it ran a passageway through which the wind blew keenly. He struck a match, found an old bit of wood on the floor, the broken root of some tree, and succeeded in firing it. Carrying his improvised torch carefully, he explored and found a twisting passage that led downward a long way. He could not follow it to the end without more light; his torch was failing him, and he recollected the candle in Mac's cabin.

He turned back at once. He had chanced on an ideal hiding place and he must know it thoroughly, know, too, if Jordan had found the other opening. Emerging, he rearranged the screen of brambles and made his way, more cautiously, toward the cabin. There was always the possibility that Jordan or his pals might return there. But it was vacant, and he had ample time to look for what he needed most, candles and matches. He found only the one half-burnt candle and two matches, evidently tossed there by the watcher after he had lighted his pipe. There was an old blanket, a remnant of Mac's camping-out there, and a coil of rope.

Sherwin stood still, staring at that coil of rope; suddenly it had an immense significance—it brought into his mind a full-fledged scheme of vengeance! The cave and the rope!

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Lesson for April 14

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by permission.

HOW JESUS' FRIENDS RESPONDED

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:16-20; 5:18-20; 10:46, 52; Luke 5:27, 28. MEMORY SELECTION—He left all, rose up, and followed him.—Luke 5:28.

Friendship calls for an exchange—not of gifts or possessions necessarily, but of service, love and fellowship.

The friends of Jesus responded to the warmth of His affection and the appeal of His call, and they gave themselves in life and service to Him.

Many in the church have forgotten that part of the friendship of Jesus Christ. They want to count Him as their friend, they expect much of Him; but they give little or nothing in return. Their love is cold, their service indifferent, their witness powerless.

Not every one of Jesus' friends is called to be a preacher or a teacher. He needs those who will be His faithful followers, just a living testimony without special office or message.

To effectively present the contrasts of our lesson, we have arranged the verses in slightly different sequence. Among the friends of Jesus

I. Some Became Preachers (Mark 1:16-20).

These men had met Jesus before (John 1:35-51), but now He was ready to call them away from their daily occupation as fishermen and make them "fishers of men."

Such a change was not an easy one to make. It meant the giving up of an established earthly calling, a place in the community, home life and family, for the service of the Lord. That was to bring persecution, ridicule, poverty and loneliness. But "straightway they forsook their nets."

Let the members of the church and pastors be on the alert to sense the call of God to young men and women to the ministry and to the mission field, and then let them do everything possible to encourage them on their way.

II. Others Became Followers (Mark 10:46, 52).

When Jesus came by, blind Bartimaeus began to cry, "Jesus, son of David have mercy on me" (v. 47). Many around him tried to hush his voice (v. 48), but he cried the more.

Through that babel of voices Jesus heard him, stopped and sent for him, and healed him. The ear of our Lord is always attuned to hear the cry of the one in need, and His heart is quick to respond to his call. He can hear the cry of the repentant sinner through all the confusing sounds of our day.

Bartimaeus became a "follower" of Jesus. He probably had no position in the church, no call to preach, but what a testimony he had. (cf. John 9:25).

Jesus needs simple, steady followers. Men and women with a plain, effective testimony of salvation. The army of the Lord is not made up of generals and officers only. Perhaps we have more of them than we need.

III. Some Stayed at Home (Mark 5:18-20).

This striking story of the deliverance of the mad man shows the importance of testimony at home. The people had asked Jesus to leave (v. 17) because in delivering the maniac He had caused some swine to go mad and run into the sea.

These men needed a witness, and the most effective possible word to them would come from the delivered demoniac. He wanted to go with Jesus, but at the Master's word he stayed at home.

It is hard to leave home and loved ones to go afar to witness for Jesus Christ, but sometimes it is easier to speak for Him in a strange land than at home. Even Jesus found no honor in His own city.

If you are called to witness for the Lord in the small circle of your own family or community, trust God to make that word for Jesus tremendously effective. He can do it!

IV. Others Left Home and Business (Luke 5:27, 28).

Levi—better known to us as Matthew—was "a member of that hated group of renegade Jews, who served the Roman invader and helped him in his cruel work of wringing extortionate taxes from the people" (Earl L. Douglass). As a result, he was rich and undoubtedly had a fine home and every desirable material possession.

He had come to know Jesus and when the call came suddenly to follow Jesus, he did not hesitate; he did not stop to gather up his money; he did not sell his house; but he stood up and left all, and followed Jesus.

If Jesus really means everything to a man or a woman there is nothing in this world that can hold him back when Jesus calls. He is ready to go to the ends of the earth, and let whosoever will care for the business, his possessions, everything (cf. Matt. 19:29).

159th and Wolf Road News
by George Crawford

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bower visited his sister, Gladina Boreczek April 2 and 3.

There was a fire in the field north of 156th near Wolf Rd. the evening of April 2nd.

Numerous children have been observed hanging around the school house after school hours. This practice should be discouraged as there is no supervisor there and sometimes they are tempted to damage property.

Mrs. Robert Roth has resigned as news reporter but let us keep the news coming in. This will keep us in closer touch with our neighbors who do not have telephones and we can thus be of greater combined strength and knowledge.

Oils are planning a new cistern. If there is any spare wood for fuel, why don't someone market it? We won't get manufactured goods very fast if we keep on burning coal when there is a coal strike.

If someone found the black doe rabbit escaped April 3rd from 113th Ave. and 159th St. please watch her on April 27th closely.

The regular meeting of the Community Club was held at the school house the evening of April 4th. Mrs. Steve Putz and Gladys Fordonski served, games were played and a pleasant time was had by all.

The Orland Park Herald will be delivered to you each Friday evening or Saturday morning if you wish. Glenn Crawford and Eugene Bowers hauled cinders for the beginning of the alley drive for Glenn and Gottlieb's Garage.

The Open Door Bible Church was conducted as usual at 3 pm. Sunday. The Rev. G. LeGrand from Oak Lawn was presiding and Mrs. White of Alpine led in the singing. The church is hoping to have electricity installed and have meetings in the middle of the week. More people are invited to attend. They would also have morning worship if enough so desire.

Betty Goepfner visited Beverly Yeager Saturday and stayed Sunday and Monday.

The primaries opened at 6 AM. on schedule with a few early votes being cast. By 10 AM. there were at least 10 voters from Wooded Estates. A light vote was forecast. The Town Ship Supervisor was present with four helpers. While we were there great convoys of Army trucks and jeeps were driving south.

Mr. and Mrs. Jahnke of Chicago spent Sunday at their Estate on 115 Ct. and 159th St.

The State highway has erected a new stop sign on 159th St. for 113th Court traffic.

A Turkey dinner was the high light Sunday when Mr. and Mrs. John Del Prince and family entertained Mr. Hank Del Prince, Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Weller, Mr. Paul Gardner and son James of Wooded Estates, and Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Schelle and family of Chicago.

Chicago spent last Thursday at the home of Mr. Paul Gardner.

Road Commissioner Bormet has authorized the grading of the roads in sections of Wooded Estates and it is hoped that this work will soon be started.

Mrs. Robt. Roth has spent the greater part of the past two weeks at the home of her mother in Chicago where she is assisting in the care of her grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Williams, who is seriously ill with a form of paralysis. Little hope is expected.

At the last meeting of Dist. 137 PTA it was formally decided to dissolve as an organization. It is unfortunate that residents of this district, particularly parents of children attending school, could not recognize the advantages a national organization of this type could offer. This failure of foresight together with a total lack of interest, cooperation, initiative and civic pride, on the part of most members, with possibly more subtle reasons, are the factors which contributed to its failure. It reflects however, the problems a future progressive mind might encounter in a world where turpentine is still considered the world's best antiseptic. A unit of library books will be purchased for the children at school, and whatever remains in the treasury will be turned over to the Achievement club.

Mr. James Gardner, son of Mr. Paul Gardner, who recently returned from service, is anxiously awaiting the arrival this week of his fiancée, Miss Karen Savanni, of Des Moines, Iowa. They intend to be married in Orland Park in the very near future.

UP-PORTUNITY. It may be airworth your while to visit the Travel Fair in the Stevens Hotel, Chicago, April 10 thru the 13th. 344 visitors will get free sightseeing rides over Chicago. All these rides will be in new 44 passenger DC-4s. Daily, for give-away, 200 orchids and gardenias will be flown in from Mexico and 3 five pound crocks of Irish butter will be flown in from Shannon.

UP-WORDS—Although liquor is forbidden on planes, 19,000 United Airline Passengers recently voted 2 to 1 for cocktail service on planes; 50 to 1 in favor of stewardesses over stewards; they want individual radio speakers, more speed, and lower fares. Seems to me they want a travelling night club, at low cost.

CHECK POINTS. Friday night, March 30, over WMAQ, the "Supper Club" program was broadcast from a Constellation flying 20,000 feet over New York. Reception of the full orchestra and cast was 100 per cent. War pilots who started their own air-freight lines, flew as many miles in 1946 as the large long established air lines. Municipal Airport plans to handle two million airline passengers during 1946 and has just installed a colored light landing system that will unclutter radio traffic. Two priests, Rev. Anthony Gendusa and Rev. Alfred Stemper, both private pilots, are heading for 10 years in the Pacific. They'll cover a wide Pacific area in a twin engine amphibious plane. So few people managed to see the P-80 jet propelled planes that flew over Chicago on Army day. It was said, "The plane is quicker than the eye". "Skyway" magazine's April issue has photos and descriptions of all the new personal planes. "Charm" magazine's April issue has a feature about women taking to the air, claiming the sky's the limit in opportunity and citing real life successes.

SAFETY OF FLIGHT. Last week 13 year old Joseph Scott made an unsuccessful attempt to join the Army. Desperate to enter the air forces, he walked all the way up to a 7th floor recruiting office because he's frightened of elevators.

BRINGING UP BABY. One airline has scheduled two nursery planes daily from Los Angeles to San Francisco. Two nurses are in attendance to answer the demands of their Royal 'highnesses' the babies!

SKY-SKETCH. The Harvey Red Top 1 rode in last week, held a "topping" surprise. When I gave the airport as my destination, the driver, Joe Biase of Harvey, said, "Well, that's just where I want to go too!" He added that he's interested in finding a local airport to base twin engine Beechcraft he's owned since 1940. Joe, a cousin of the late Major Bong, was an Army Pilot with the 310 Fighter Group, Suicide Squadron, made 92 missions in the South Pacific in a P-51. Score: 15 enemy planes knocked down. Now, he's interested in racing cars for the International Speed Races at 130th and Ashland and in upping his Private Pilot's License to a commercial.

OVERHEARD—Sunday, I invited Candy—the gal student pilot—to go with us on a flight making the rounds of the airports. At Prosperi Airport—Mary "Ma" Prosperi said: "Buddy Guedel has been flying since last Summer so he'd be ready to solo on his 16th birthday. He made it last Sunday." Ed. Prosperi, manager of the airport is in New York. A new instructor on the field, Eugene Warren, a civilian pilot before the war, flew the "hump" in India as a service pilot. Robert Fuqua, Joe Higgins, Ben Tyclusen and Capt. Robert McMillan are now in civies again flying on the field. After some pleasant "hanger-talk" with "Ma" Prosperi, local flyers John "Smitty" Smith and C. A. P. Lt. Ted Farrington, the new line boy Robert Moe gave us a prop and we headed for Rubikam. At Rubikam, Bernice Jacobs, wife of manager, Bill Jacobs said, "Instructors Roy Cleveland and Ray Starzyk had checked out in the twin engine Cessna. Pauline Nickeloff, the flight office manager, will soon return from a week's vacation and that Pilot Rohman had won his private license. Back in the air, Candy and I, because of smoke coming off the lake shore, and a lowering selling, headed back to home port. That's all for now.

Birdseye View of Army Day In Chicago

Although the April day was bathed in sunshine, the air was very crisp, and we felt quite chilly and decided a hot cup of coffee would help out immensely. We soon located an eating place and after warming up, walked over to Michigan boulevard. It was now a few minutes after ten o'clock, and a mass of humanity packed both sides of the thoroughfare so that it was impossible to see the street. This great throng was massing to see the great parade in which 15,000 service men marched.

With no taxi in sight we decided to walk to Soldier Field. We went over to Wabash Avenue and found the sidewalks free of congestion. The air was just zippy enough to make one enjoy the walk. Just before we walked over to Wabash Ave., we noticed a number of colored men doing a rushing business, selling tall banana baskets for the spectators to stand on so they could look over the shoulders and heads of those standing in front of them.

After walking a few blocks down Wabash, we cut over to Michigan and found it less congested than it had been a few blocks back.

While we were crossing a long wooden bridge near the Field Museum, we suddenly heard the hum of airplanes and a wonderful array of Uncle Sam's air-might filled the sky, the planes flying in formation of five and seven.

Immediately thereafter we saw the dog scout battalion and their masters marching toward Soldiers Field. They passed right by us on the bridge. Each dog had a blanket on and was on a leash. These dogs, we later learned from the announcer at the Field, had served in the Pacific area and were pets whose owners had donated them to the government for the duration of the war and that the government after returning these dogs to their owners, will buy other dogs and train them. The announcer said that training dogs for scout duty was a German idea and was first tried out in World War I.

Exciting "Ohs" and "Ahs" from women and children and friendly grins from the men folk greeted the 25 GI pooches, members of the 48th Infantry Scout Dog platoon from Fort Campbell, Ky. Chows, German Shepherds, Collies and Doberman-Pinschers. Each had a new white blanket and white leashes held by their soldier-handler. Each dog will obey only his own handler and the latter's word is law. These dogs are not trained as man killers, but are trained not to bark. They can detect a person or movements a thousand yards away and give a warning by tugging on the leash. Their warning was always found to be correct.

We took our seats about 11:45. Shortly after 1 o'clock, the program opened with a crack military band playing a number of selections as they marched onto the field. The background of this famous band dates back to Washington's day. Next came the Red Diamond's famed 11th Infantry regiment, which has been in nearly every major conflict since 1861; the 10th Infantry with a history going back to 1855; the 2nd Infantry which guarded Fort Dearborn on the site of Chicago 125 years ago and the 7th Engineer Battalion, whose motto is: "Seven Times Tested by Fire."

The time slipped by quite quickly, and the huge crowd of 100,000 witnessed a number of interesting events before the Presidential party arrived. Necks were craned when there was a sudden loud noise followed by a "Whoosh" and the crowd got a big thrill when the P-50 Jet propulsion plane, "Shooting Star", shot across Grant Park and Soldiers Field. The announcer said these planes were travelling at a speed of 600 miles per hour and could climb 6,000 feet a minute.

A sky writer also claimed much attention when he wrote the word, "Army" in the sky.

Amid the presidential salute of 21 guns, President Truman and his party entered Soldiers Field shortly before three o'clock and circled around the field. The great crowd cheered lustily. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff, almost stole the show from President Truman. Women and children cheered lustily, but the most enthusiastic cries for their former commander, came from the young men in the crowd wearing discharge buttons.

Mayor Kelly as master of ceremonies, introduced all of the dignitaries and speakers.

Gen. Eisenhower, during his speech stressed the point that war must be outlawed, but that it will take a united movement on the part of all nations to bring this about, and that until that time comes, we must have the military. He pointed out that there are elements in Europe today who do not want peace but are watching every opportunity to try again to promote war. He declared this element must be forced by military might to accept the peace.

Gov. Dwight H. Green, Sen. Scott Lucas and a number of other members of the President's cabinet, made brief addresses.

President Truman spoke last. He championed American foreign policy as a "universal" pattern to protect the weak from the strong through supporting the United Nations to the utmost. He touched upon the need for unification of the armed forces, temporary extension of the Selective Service Act, and a universal military training program. A large part of his 20 minute speech was devoted to praise of the army, units of which had staged a thrilling demonstration of ground and air power prior to the President's address. In closing he said, "Our army has written many glorious chapters in our nation's history, but none so brilliant as the last. It is a glorious history of men against the forces of nature as well as against the forces of evil."

The gusty weather conspired to drive the great crowd to some cozier spot away from the lake. The 100,000 who were in the Field to welcome the President, had dwindled to about 70,000 by the time he left. Despite the adverse weather conditions, Army Day in Chicago 1946 will be long be remembered and was well worth while braving the cold for.

As we were leaving the stadium we overheard one candy hawker say that he had sold 1800 candy bars during the afternoon at 10 cents apiece. The main thing missing was hot coffee.

A REPORT TO THOSE WAITING FOR TELEPHONE SERVICE IN MOKENA

Providing telephone service as soon as possible for waiting applicants is our No. 1 objective. We're doing just that... as fast as manufacturing capacity and human energy and ingenuity will allow.

We're happy to report that one of the causes of the delay—lack of telephone instruments—has just about been eliminated. Very soon there will be no one waiting for main service in our territory because of a telephone instrument shortage. We have not, however, been able to provide telephone service for all those waiting, because of other equipment needed principally in our central office... equipment which makes the telephone work and which connects it with all the other telephones. This central office equipment, unlike the telephone instrument, cannot be mass produced. It must be "tailor-made" and it takes a long time to build and to install it.

Present plans indicate that we will have enough of this equipment installed by Fall to provide service for all those now on the waiting list. We might do a little better than these estimates, but because of conditions beyond our control we may not be able to do as well. At any rate we thought you would like to know what the outlook is now.

Day and night, telephone manufacturing goes on in the rush to catch up. You may be sure that your application will be taken care of as rapidly as possible and in its proper turn. We will get in touch with you promptly, as soon as your order moves to the head of the list. In the meantime, please accept our thanks for your patience and cooperation. It has been a great help to us in our job of trying to provide telephone service for everyone who wants it.

If you did not make any additions to your buildings or add new buildings on your lots in 1944, your valuation on your 1945 tax bills should be the same as 1944 valuation, so compare them. If any increase it is the wish of the County Assessor to have you call at the Appeal Board room No. 337, County Building and file a complaint so the adjustment can be made, but if your valuation for 1945 is the same as 1944 the cause of the increase in your 1945 taxes would be due to the tax rate and the county has nothing to do with making up the tax rate as he would not be in position to know how many dollars in taxes each local taxing body needs to run their districts from year to year. The tax rates are made up by the tax spending bodies after making up their annual budget, when they then file their respective tax levy with the County Clerk who in turn then spreads rate against your valuation and arrives at taxes you are assessed for, for that year.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 7, was:

"UNREALITY"

The Golden Text was:

"There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing; there is that maketh himself poor, yet hath great riches" (Prov. 13: 7).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"Strengthen ye the weak hands, and confirm the feeble knees. Say to them that are of a fearful heart, be strong, fear not: behold, your God will come with vengeance even God with a recompense; he will come and save you. Then the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart, and the tongue of the dumb sing. . . . And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads: they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away" (Isa. 35: 3, 4, 5, 6, 10).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"The realization that all inharmonies are unreal brings objects and thoughts into human view in their true light, and presents them as beautiful and immortal. . . . The spiritual fact in all things. The spiritual fact, repeated in the action of man and the whole universe, is harmonious and is the ideal of Truth. . . . The Scripture declares, 'The Lord He is God (good); there is none else beside Him! Even so, harmony is universal, and discord is unreal' (pp. 276, 207, 414).

FORTUNATE . . . Robert and Elly Lindahl and sons feel "fortunate" that they have a two-room apartment and can live in Denmark. Family income is about $1,600 a year, with $200 going for taxes. Pauline Frederick, WNU Foreign Correspondent, was a guest in their home.

EUROPE'S LITTLE PEOPLE — 1946

Copenhagen Most 'American' Of All Cities on the Continent

By PAULINE FREDERICK
WNU Foreign Correspondent

COPENHAGEN.—Denmark's revered Grundtvig has said that this is a land where "few have too much and fewer have too little." Copenhagen is a city of one million, containing one-fourth of the population of the whole country. And I might add that American army men visiting here on leave are saying that Copenhagen reminds them more of an American city than any place they have seen over here.

My trip here was extremely worth while, for I had a chance to meet and get acquainted with Robert and Elly Lindahl and their two sons, Svend, aged three, and Palle, who is two.

The Lindahls live two flights up in a two-room apartment of a large red-brick apartment building. They have a single living room where they also eat, a smaller bedroom shared by the four of them, a kitchen with gas-range and cupboards and sink like those in thousands of American kitchens, a bath with shower. The Lindahls lean toward simple, modern furnishings in warm rusts and greens with colorful land and seascapes on the walls. It was February, but there was a bunch of golden forsythia on the coffee table. The blonde, bright-eyed hostess and her husband offered cherry wine in which we toasted Denmark and America.

Robert Lindahl is a clerk in the office of the oldest newspaper in Scandinavia. He earns eight thousand crowns a year, or a little better than $1,600, and around $200 of in any other country of Europe except Belgium. It is not surprising that in a dairy land like this she is able to give her children the milk they need and the eggs and cream and many of the other essentials. In fact, in the food line only the following are rationed: butter, sugar, brown bread, white bread, oatmeal, coffee, tea and cocoa. Since the liberation the butter ration has been cut from three pounds per person per month to two pounds because it is being exported. Each person is allowed about three and one-third pounds of sugar a month. Candy is scarce, especially chocolate. Each person may have a little less than three-fourths of a pound of bread per day, about one-half pound of coffee or cocoa and a little more than one-fourth pound of tea per month. The soap ration is one-third of a pound per person for personal use each month, and the same amount in soap flakes or powder for household use.

Svende and Palle Lindahl are having a chance to grow up in a little country that will offer them many advantages if there is not another war. (But there are many Danes who expect that the United States and Great Britain are going to get tired of their occupation job in Germany and withdraw, and in that event a new Hitler will soon come to power.) Because of the advance in medicine and hygiene, the average life span of these little boys should be 64 years, and if they have any sisters, theirs should be 66 years. If they decide to live in the country they will probably have a farm of from 24 to 120 acres, the size of most Danish farms. If they live in the city they will probably have two-room flats such as they occupy now, as that is an average city dwelling.

From olden times the Danish State has recognized its obligation to supervise and watch over the normal and physical upbringing of children and take special care of incorrigible and perverted as well as neglected and deserted youngsters.

When it comes time to go to school, the Lindahl boys will find that not only are the secondary schools free, but instruction at universities and other advanced institutions of learning is also free. When they are ready to take jobs they will find that 52 per cent of their fellow men are engaged in manufacturing and crafts and 28 per cent in forestry and fishery.

They will find that they are living under a constitutional democracy. With fervence people here talk of their king who stayed with them during the occupation, while at the same time they cling ardently to their democratic institutions.

Yes, Svende and Palle Lindahl, you were fortunate to be born in Denmark—that is, if there isn't another war in Europe.

Denmark's Economy Is Well Balanced

Denmark is one of the few countries where the cost of living and wages have been kept more or less in balance. Finance Minister Thorkil Kristensen explained to me that during the occupation the Germans offered high wages to get workers to build airbases and other installations. Wages in towns rose between 60 and 65 per cent, and went up even more in agricultural areas. Since 1939 the cost of living has gone up 60 per cent, although the quality of all goods has gone down. Whether or not high wages can be maintained depends on the competition from world wages. The finance minister said the prices Denmark is able to get from her exports will greatly affect the wage standard at home. Cotton and wool are almost nonexistent, since the Danes are trying to build up dollars to increase the imports. It is harder to get clothing than food in Denmark.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Units' Locations a Secret

The war department has announced that as of March 19 no further information will be furnished as to the whereabouts of various units in the armed forces as they have done during the past several months. The army explains that during the period of redeployment when so many units were moving in transit from one sector to another they permitted publication of the positions of these units.

At this time, however, the army says that the billets of the various units are more or less semi-permanent and that again, for reasons of military security, their positions will not be publicized.

So please do not ask us to obtain this information as we have done in the past.

Ten regional offices and 12 forest and range experiment stations have been qualified to give soil conservation and forest field work training to veterans by the department of agriculture. The training course may be confined to on-the-job methods or a combination of this training and a course in an educational institution. Employment within the U. S. D. A. or with private interests is an objective.

Questions and Answers

Q. When I was shipped to the states for discharge, I was told to leave my foot locker with my battalion supply officer and he would have it shipped to my home. I did and I have been home six months and no foot locker. Who can I write to in a case like this? — J. M. E., Seattle, Wash.

A. Write to Personal Effects division, U. S. Quartermaster corps, U. S. Army, Kansas City, Mo.

Q. My brother enlisted in May, 1944, for the ASTP. He went to college for eight months, then was transferred to the infantry. Will his time in ASTP count as time in service? Is he considered a volunteer? — L. G., Chicago, Ill.

A. If he was on active duty during his ASTP service, his time counts. If he was in the enlisted reserve status, his time does not count. The army says all men of draft age are considered inductees.

Q. My son, a private first class, is now in a hospital from wounds received in Italy. In a big push, his sergeant and corporal were killed. He was placed in command and led his squad for five days when he was wounded. Should he not receive a sergeant's pay from that time on? — Reader, Boonville, N. Y.

A. Not unless he was promoted to a sergeant.

Q. I entered the army in December, 1945. My father had an accident, my mother was sick and unable to care for him, no one at home, so I was discharged from the army to care for them and run the farm he rented. I lacked a few days of staying in three months. Am I entitled to any of the bill of rights? — A worried farmer, Danielsville, Ga.

A. The law says you must have served at least 90 days on active duty unless discharged for disability prior to that time. You evidently were released at your convenience on a hardship case and therefore the veterans administration says you are not entitled to the benefits.

Q. My son is a second lieutenant and entered the service January 6, 1945, went overseas December 21, 1945. How long before he can be discharged? — Mrs. F. A. W., Dubuque, Iowa.

A. Critical point score for a second lieutenant is 67 points or 45 months. As of September 2, your son would have about 8 points and 8 months.

Q. I have been receiving servicemen's readjustment allowance for 10 months on self-employment as owner and part-operator of a business. Am waiting on appeal of service-connected disability. Will the readjustment allowance be stopped after one year or one year plus time in service or until results of my disability appeal are received? — C. D. VD., Alva, Okla.

A. The law says 52 weeks is the maximum for drawing servicemen's readjustment allowance.

Q. Can a former wife receive alimony from a retired army man through the U. S. treasury if she has a court decree stating it be paid in this manner each month? — Reader, Chattanooga, Tenn.

A. That is purely a legal question. Consult your attorney.

Q. My husband was retired with a pension from the regular army after 30 years of service. Can I claim any support for my child and myself from his pension? — Mrs. L. B., Philadelphia, Pa.

A. This is a legal question and must be settled in the courts.

How to Fight the Menace of FIRE

A Wet Towel and a Flashlight may save your life!—says the National Safety Council

1 Call the fire department at first opportunity! Fire is always dangerous—especially at night. Most fires do occur at night! If you smell smoke, reach for your "Eveready" flashlight. Feel doors before opening them. If a door is hot, don't open it!

2 Wet a towel or cloth; cover your face and arms. Close doors behind you to reduce drafts that may fan the flames. If the heat is severe, remember that heat rises—crawl! If trapped on an upper floor, make a rope of bedclothes. As a last resort only, throw out a mattress and jump down onto it.

3 To avoid danger, you have to see it—so keep your flashlight with you until you're safe! Watch for collapsing ceilings... But the best way to avoid fire is to prevent it! Your flashlight gives a much better light than matches or a candle, and it's much safer tool!

4 To help prevent fire or fight it—or for any flashlight need—rely on "Eveready" Batteries. Ask your dealer for them by name. The days when you had to accept "second choice" batteries—or none—are past. "Eveready" Batteries have no equal—that's why they're the biggest-selling flashlight batteries in the world!

Tinley Students Go To Springfield

On Saturday, April 6, 32 boys and girls of the 7th and 8th grades of the Tinley Park school left by school bus for Springfield, Ill.

The first stop on the tour was the Tampico Indian Mounds South of Peoria. Here it was possible to see how the Indians buried their dead many hundreds of years ago. Work on this mound has been done by the University of Chicago and all skeletons are lying just as they were found.

After leaving the Mounds the group headed for Lincoln's New Salem. This is now a State Park and has been reconstructed as it was in the days when Lincoln came there to make his home for ten years. While at New Salem without doubt the most popular American ever to have lived. It was explained that hardly a week passes but what a visitor from some foreign country visits the Lincoln Shrine. It is required that Lincoln's Picture be hung in the schools of 18 of these foreign countries.

Following the tour of New Salem, the group went into Springfield where they were quartered in rooms at the St. Nichols hotel. Here they were served dinner in a private dining room.

Following breakfast at the hotel on Sunday morning the group visited Lincoln's tomb and his Springfield home. Those who wished were then taken to the church of their choice and following dinner at the hotel the tour ended with the trip back to Tinley Park.

Checking the Chest X-Ray

A doctor examines 4" x 5" X-ray films on a view-box to determine whether his patient has tuberculosis. Although tuberculosis has no outward symptoms in its early and most easily curable stages, its presence can be discovered through an X-ray. Christmas Seals support an educational program on the importance of periodic X-raying.
